St. Bonaventure University
School of Business, Department of Finance
Assistant Professor of Economics Position

St Bonaventure University invites applications for a position in economics at the Visiting Assistant Professor level. Especially well-qualified candidates may be considered for a tenure-track position. Candidates must either possess a Ph.D. from an accredited university or be in the process of completing a Ph.D. Candidates must be available to teach undergraduate courses starting in August 2016, subject to budget approval.

The candidate will be expected to teach introductory microeconomics and macroeconomics. The ability to teach Money and Banking, Statistics, Econometrics, and Intermediate Microeconomics is ideal.

St Bonaventure University emphasizes teaching and is looking for candidates who are excited about being a part of our student learning-focused mission. Individuals with a prior teaching experience, the ability to show evidence of innovative, effective teaching, and a commitment to student success are especially encouraged to apply.

St Bonaventure University, a Catholic university dedicated to educational excellence in the Franciscan tradition, is located in the beautiful Allegany foothills of Western New York. There are 1800 undergraduate and 500 graduate students enrolled. The School of Business is accredited by AACSB and has recently moved into its new state-of-the-art Swan Business Center home. The economics program is part of the Department of Finance. The department has received recognition from the CFA Institute as part of their University Recognition Program as providing a high-quality curriculum.

Applicants should submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, evidence of teaching effectiveness, research sample, and reference letters to econsearch@sbu.edu
