- Teaching, including the preparation of course syllabi and classes, the preparation and grading of examinations/evaluations, the supervision of laboratories and other practica, and the direction of student driven research projects..

Academic Advising:

- Meet with students as needed by appointment.
- Advise and assist students as determined by program requirements.
- Maintain general knowledge of degree requirements for graduation from the Physician Assistant Program

Institutional Service:

- Participation in activities (usually through committee work) designed to advance the mission and quality of the University, School, and Departmental programs, including admissions, curriculum and program evaluation. Assignments to routine committee work will be made in consideration of other demands placed on the faculty member by the University.
- Attendance at Department, School, and general Faculty and University meetings including commencements, convocations, and other official University exercises.

Professional Growth and Development:

- Maintain NYS licensure and credentialing by the appropriate certifying agency (NCCPA, etc).
- Maintain state-of-the-art knowledge and competence in the appropriate disciplines

Successful candidates will have the following selected qualifications and skills:

- NCCPA Certified Physician Assistant
- Current licensure or eligible for licensure as a Physician Assistant in NYS
- Master's degree or significant experience in lieu of degree and a willingness to pursue a Master's degree.
- Minimum of 3-5 years of medical experience as well as experience relevant to educational settings with particular emphasis on medical education.

Applicants should submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae/resume and contact information for three professional references to kbyoung@sbu.edu
